

The Worlds Supremacy Problem

As the world's problems continue to grow one must clearly determine not if, but when and how these problems will affect their personal lives. From the ignorance of Wall Street to the death and destruction in the black communities, to the murder of innocent babies, we must all see the core of the world's mounting issues is the world's supremacy problem. I believe that there are three major supremacy issues the world faces today; racial supremacy, religious supremacy, and cultural supremacy.

The race issue has plagued not only America but the entire world. Realistically, one needs to look no further than the racial issues America faces in many of its modern cities. Groups like the Tea Party and the New Black Panther Party show that the fight between whites and blacks that started 20,000 years ago isn't going anywhere. We can also look to the issues that America's closest ally Israel is having with Western Asia, mistakenly called the Middle East. Their conflict with nations like Iran shows the Global racial problem directly. Racial wars have caused the death of millions of people. Need proof? We can look back at the Greco-Roman invasion of Egypt or the 100 year South African wars between the Zulus and the British Europeans. We can also look at the many wars that began in 1791 between France and Haiti. One with a clear mind can see that racial supremacy has caused more harm than good.

Next we have religious supremacy which has crippled the world since the concept of religion existed. Many wars including the crusades between Christians and Muslims have destroyed countless lives. The verbal sometimes physical battles over Bible versions like the dispute between King James and the Christian church show the historical religious supremacy problem. The one thing we must all realize as Americans is how negatively many of us look at others who are not in the same religion as we are. I have had numerous experiences in my life of Christian folks talking negatively about other religions or even different denominations of their own religion. I have grown also to see members of the Muslim communities totally disrespect other religions by speaking negatively about those who don't believe in Islam. As many of the great African scholars of the past have stated, history gives us a way of understanding the world better. Through history one will begin to understand that there are several elements that allows man to corrupt spirituality. Some of the elements are belief, literature, faith, and fear. These elements historically have allowed spiritual people to turn the other cheek to the enslavement of one group of humans by another. These elements have also caused conflict within the world's religions. For example; In Christianity the conflict between the Byzantine and the Catholics, and in Islam, the conflict between the Sunni and the Shiite. As hip hop artist Nas once stated "Religion misunderstood is poison."

Finally we have cultural supremacy also known as the battle between the rich and the poor. Again history is our guide. We can look at the Berlin conference in 1884 in which European nations split up Africa because of many things including the exploitation of their resources. Other historical examples that we can gain an understanding through are the intellectual invasion of Egypt in 450 BC; or the Dust Bowl Era here in America in the early 1900's where cultural supremacy showed its true colors.

As one begins to think beyond belief, one clearly sees the sickness of one person has helped make another person strong, and that those who are mentally dead use their ego to live. The world's problems are mounting; disease, disaster and death is everywhere. Although I believe that the positive human spirit one day will cure the world's problems, I ask clearly what are we going to do today to change the destructive course that humans have been on for centuries to save our biological existence.
